

DETAILS MATTER

Troy Campbell Photography

▮ A custom-designed signature pillow by Dawn Causa given to a client upon completion of the project.

Describing Dawn Causa as someone who doesn't like to cut corners is perfect.

As a licensed interior designer, Causa prides herself on the very hands-on, detailed oriented approach of her boutique firm Causa Design Group.

For her it is all about the details. "It's not a one-size-fits-all approach when designing a space," she said.

"Every client's home is unique. It is essential the house works for the client's lifestyle. I make sure that no design detail is overlooked, especially the minor things most people do not even notice."

If you look very closely at a Causa Design home, you will discover such attention to detail. For instance, electrical outlet plates are placed horizontally rather than vertically. In bathrooms, Causa uses custom-designed medicine cabinets with interior power sources to combat counter clutter.

"The outlets look more visually attractive if they run parallel rather than perpendicular to countertops," she said. "Eliminating counter clutter not only has a visual appeal but also creates a physically calming effect."

Speaking of details and small touches, Causa shared that when she completes a design project she loves to leave a little unexpected surprise for her clients such as her signature custom-designed pillow.

"When you marry beauty and functionality, your space will undoubtedly feel like home," said Causa.